

To the Editor,

It hasn't taken long for 'Our Common Ground' to show that they are just another name for the same group of people that are opposed to the timber industry.

Pulp the Mill, TAP, Wilderness Society, Get Up and now Our Common Ground are all the same group of people trying to re invent themselves to justify their own existence.

Well I am no ones fool and I am more interested in jobs, health and education in the lead up to the State election. Not the so called forest debate that should have been put to bed years ago when the Regional Forest Agreement was signed. This agreement protects high conservation areas of Tasmania, while ensuring there is a sustainable timber industry for the future based on both regrowth and plantation forests.

The RFA is the common ground I believe in.
