Pulp Fiction

Elissa Stillman and Karen Richardson are correct – there are continually the same old people having the same old arguments every week in the Mail Opinion pages (16 March). I am glad I am not one of them as I have only ever had a single letter published in this fine journal.

I presume you are referring to Sarah Rees and Stewart Kerr, who continually reappear to stuff their green-tainted views in your faces. Thank heavens we had Clare Haywood (A dose of reality) to give a realistic view of the world last week. Just one correction Clare, it is NOT 1% of Victoria that is logged each year it is only 0.12% of the total FOREST AREA annually. That is the facts, certainly not figures like Sarah and Stewart would pluck from the air.

I promise you all I will never write to the Mountain Views Mail again so long as serial offenders refrain from their habits. After all, I am too busy helping people get on with life while the “too regulars” to this column are busy trying to hinder those people from making an honest living.

And that is what my organisation is all about Sarah Rees & Co – keeping real people in real jobs in real communities.
